Presiding over the ceremony, Maj. Dr. Anandappa I. congratulated the newly elected council and encouraged them to perform their duties with commitment and transparency. Report on The Flow Factor

Organised by the Student Council of Seshadripuram College

Organised by BG Jayanth and Krishna Jain

The Student Council of Seshadripuram College successfully organised The Flow Factor, an engaging and knowledge-driven event designed to introduce students to the dynamic world of logistics and supply chain management. The programme aimed to help participants understand the hidden systems and operational networks that influence the movement of products and services in everyday life. With the theme “The Hidden Journey of Everything You Use”, the event created an interactive learning environment that combined theoretical understanding with practical application.

The session commenced with an introduction to the significance of logistics and supply chain management in modern business operations. Students were encouraged to think beyond finished products and examine the journey involved in sourcing, manufacturing, storage, transportation, and delivery. Real-world examples and industry references were used to demonstrate how supply chain systems act as the backbone of businesses across sectors.

A major highlight of the event was the discussion surrounding the importance of global logistics networks, including references to the Suez Canal and its impact on international trade. Through these examples, participants gained insight into how disruptions in logistics channels can influence businesses and economies worldwide. The event further explored supply chain structures through practical business illustrations, helping students connect classroom concepts with real market practices.

The presentation featured detailed discussions on supply chain models adopted by companies such as Café Coffee Day and Mahindra. The Café Coffee Day case explained the concept of vertical integration through stages including coffee sourcing, processing, warehousing, transportation, café operations, and customer experience. Similarly, Mahindra’s outsourcing network was used to showcase how organisations collaborate with specialised suppliers and manufacturing partners to maintain efficiency and production quality. These examples enabled participants to understand the strategic decisions involved in supply chain management.

Adding energy and participation to the programme, The Chaotic Factory Game emerged as one of the most interactive segments of the event. Participants assumed various supply chain roles such as supplier, manufacturer, warehouse manager, wholesaler, transportation provider, retailer, customer, and consumer. Different products ranging from electronics and automobiles to personal care items were incorporated into the activity, allowing students to experience the complexity of coordination and decision-making within supply chains. This practical simulation encouraged teamwork, communication, and problem-solving while demonstrating the consequences of inefficiencies and delays.

The event also introduced students to different operational models including warehouse models, dark stores, and kiosk models. Concepts such as procurement, inventory management, macro and micro warehouses, cold and heated storage, product kiosks, and service-oriented kiosks were discussed in detail. Participants learned how evolving business models and consumer demands have transformed logistics strategies in the modern marketplace.

Another important segment focused on the role of technology in modern logistics. Discussions highlighted how technological integration simplifies logistics processes and improves supply chain efficiency. The programme emphasised the growing dependence on digital systems, integrated platforms, and agile practices to overcome operational challenges and maintain competitive advantage in business environments.

The event concluded with a case study on supply chain optimisation and a discussion on the challenges faced by global organisations while implementing efficient supply chain systems. Participants explored possible solutions such as change management programmes, cost-benefit analysis, integrated IT systems, and agile operational practices. The session reinforced the importance of adaptability, innovation, and strategic planning in achieving supply chain excellence.

The Flow Factor proved to be a valuable academic and practical learning experience for students. Through presentations, discussions, games, and case studies, the event successfully created awareness about logistics and supply chain management while encouraging analytical thinking and active participation. The Student Council, under the organisation of BG Jayanth and Krishna Jain, deserves appreciation for conducting an informative and engaging event that broadened students' understanding of an increasingly important field of business.

Organised with the objective of strengthening the bond between alumni and the institution, the programme reflected the enduring relationship shared by former students and their alma mater.

The Annual Alumni Meet was conceived as more than a social gathering; it was a celebration of memories, achievements, and the collective journey of generations of Seshadripuram students. Alumni from different academic years returned to the campus, revisiting familiar spaces and reconnecting with teachers, friends, and classmates who had contributed to their personal and professional journeys. The event highlighted the institution's belief that the relationship between a college and its students extends far beyond graduation and continues through lifelong association and shared values.

The programme commenced with a warm welcome extended to alumni and guests, creating an atmosphere of joy and belonging. The college quadrangle was transformed into a vibrant venue that reflected the festive spirit of homecoming. Alumni were greeted with enthusiasm, and the gathering soon became a lively reunion marked by conversations, shared memories, and renewed friendships. The presence of former students from diverse professional backgrounds added richness and meaning to the occasion, demonstrating the impact of the institution in shaping successful and responsible individuals.

The Students' Council also played an active role in the successful conduct of the Alumni Meet through their dedicated volunteering efforts. Council members assisted in welcoming and guiding alumni, coordinating registration activities, managing seating arrangements, and ensuring smooth communication throughout the programme. Their enthusiastic involvement contributed significantly to maintaining discipline, hospitality, and the overall organisation of the event. The volunteering experience also provided Students' Council members with valuable exposure to event coordination, teamwork, and public relations while allowing them to interact with alumni and understand the importance of institutional networking and legacy.

A major highlight of the event was the interaction between alumni and faculty members. Former students expressed gratitude towards teachers and mentors whose guidance had played a defining role in their academic and personal growth. Faculty members, in turn, welcomed the alumni with warmth and pride, celebrating their accomplishments and contributions across various fields. These interactions created emotional and memorable moments, reinforcing the strong emotional connection that alumni continue to share with the institution.

The programme was marked by an atmosphere of celebration and camaraderie, where memories of student life were revisited with enthusiasm and affection. Alumni engaged in meaningful conversations, and the homecoming spirit fostered a sense of unity and belonging, reminding everyone present that the institution remains a shared space of learning, friendship, and lifelong memories.

Beyond celebration and nostalgia, the Annual Alumni Meet carried institutional significance by strengthening the relationship between alumni and the college. Such interactions create valuable opportunities for mentorship, networking, and future collaboration, enabling alumni to contribute meaningfully towards the development and growth of the institution. The programme reflected SCOSA's commitment towards maintaining an active alumni network that supports both former and present students while preserving the heritage and legacy of Seshadripuram College.

The successful conduct of the Annual Alumni Meet 2026 – Alumni Homecoming stands as a testament to the dedicated efforts of SCOSA, faculty members, organisers, Students' Council volunteers, and support staff who worked together to make the event meaningful and memorable. MOCK PARLIAMENT

The Students' Council of Seshadripuram College, under the initiative of IQAC, successfully organised “Mock Parliament” on 09 March 2026 at 9:00 AM in the College Auditorium. Marking a significant milestone in the institutional activities of the college, this programme was organised for the first time, making it a pioneering initiative aimed at promoting democratic engagement and experiential learning among students. The event was conceptualised not merely as an academic simulation but as an interactive and meaningful platform where students could understand parliamentary functioning while actively discussing and deliberating upon issues concerning campus life. The programme witnessed enthusiastic participation from Students' Council members, Class Representatives, and students from different classes, transforming the auditorium into a vibrant democratic forum that reflected the spirit and discipline of an actual parliamentary session.

The first-ever Mock Parliament was introduced with the objective of bridging the gap between classroom learning and practical civic understanding. While parliamentary democracy is often studied theoretically, the Students' Council sought to create an environment where students could experience the essence of governance, opposition, accountability, and public dialogue firsthand. The initiative aimed to nurture leadership qualities, communication skills, and democratic values while encouraging constructive interaction between student representatives and the larger student body. The novelty of the programme generated considerable curiosity and excitement, making it one of the most engaging student-centred activities conducted during the academic year.

The uniqueness of the programme lay in its carefully designed parliamentary structure. The Students' Council members represented the ruling party, assuming the responsibility of governance and presenting themselves as the body accountable for student-related activities and initiatives. In contrast, the Class Representatives and students represented the opposition party, whose role was to critically examine, question, and challenge the decisions and functioning of the council. This arrangement brought realism and relevance to the proceedings, ensuring that the programme moved beyond symbolic role-play and evolved into an issue-based democratic exercise rooted in the realities of student life and campus administration.

The parliamentary session commenced under the supervision of the Speaker, who maintained order and ensured adherence to parliamentary procedures and decorum throughout the proceedings. The ruling party initiated the session by outlining the activities, responsibilities, and efforts undertaken by the Students' Council towards student welfare, event management, and campus engagement. Council members highlighted their contributions and explained the rationale behind various initiatives undertaken during their tenure. Their presentations reflected preparation and responsibility, setting the stage for a detailed and thought-provoking parliamentary discussion.

Following the presentation by the ruling party, the opposition session commenced with Class Representatives and students actively raising questions concerning various issues occurring within the college. The debates centred around matters relating to student welfare, communication between representatives and students, effectiveness of event coordination, accessibility of information, campus-related concerns, and the overall functioning of student leadership. The opposition rigorously questioned the Students' Council regarding decisions, implementation of activities, and responsiveness towards student concerns. These questions reflected the opinions and expectations of the larger student community, giving voice to concerns that students considered important within the academic environment.

The parliamentary proceedings soon developed into a dynamic and intellectually engaging exchange of perspectives. Students representing the opposition demonstrated remarkable confidence and preparedness while presenting arguments, seeking explanations, and expressing concerns regarding issues affecting campus life. At the same time, the ruling party responded by providing clarifications, defending decisions, and acknowledging practical limitations and challenges involved in administration and event management. This process of questioning and answering closely resembled the functioning of real parliamentary institutions, where governance remains accountable through active scrutiny and debate.

One of the most remarkable features of the first Mock Parliament was the constructive and disciplined nature of the discussions. Although the opposition questioned the council extensively, the debates remained respectful, organised, and focused on solutions rather than disagreement. Participants displayed maturity while articulating differing viewpoints, thereby highlighting the importance of dialogue and mutual understanding within democratic systems. The Speaker played a crucial role in preserving parliamentary decorum and ensuring that every participant was provided with a fair opportunity to contribute to the proceedings. This disciplined structure enhanced the authenticity of the parliamentary experience and enabled participants to understand the significance of rules, procedure, and respectful engagement.

The programme proved to be an enriching learning experience for all participants. Students developed and strengthened essential skills such as public speaking, leadership, communication, analytical reasoning, and critical thinking. The nature of parliamentary debate required participants to think spontaneously, defend their viewpoints logically, and respond effectively to opposing arguments. Students representing the ruling party gained insight into the responsibilities associated with governance and leadership, while those in the opposition learned the value of constructive criticism and democratic accountability. The collaborative preparation involved in organising arguments and parliamentary positions also strengthened teamwork, coordination, and strategic thinking among participants.

Beyond the development of skills, the Mock Parliament carried deeper educational and institutional significance. By integrating real college issues into a democratic framework, the programme encouraged transparency and strengthened communication between student representatives and the wider student community. Students experienced democracy not as an abstract political concept but as a practical process founded upon participation, questioning, responsibility, and dialogue. The event reinforced the understanding that institutions progress through constructive engagement and that meaningful leadership requires accountability and responsiveness.

The successful organisation of the first-ever Mock Parliament stands as a testament to the vision and commitment of the Students' Council and the support extended by IQAC and faculty members. The programme fulfilled its objectives by providing students with practical exposure to parliamentary functioning while simultaneously creating a constructive forum to address concerns and encourage participation in campus life. The active involvement of both the ruling and opposition groups contributed significantly to the success and relevance of the event, making it an intellectually stimulating and memorable initiative.

The Students' Council expresses its heartfelt gratitude to the college management, Maj. Dr. Anandappa I., Principal, Prof. Sindhu M. M., IQAC Coordinator, Dr. Shruthi C., Student Welfare Officer, faculty members, organisers, and all participants for their encouragement, cooperation, and support in making this pioneering initiative a grand success. As the first Mock Parliament conducted in the institution, the programme concluded on a positive and reflective note, leaving students with stronger democratic values, enhanced communication skills, and a deeper understanding of leadership, accountability, and participatory governance while setting a meaningful precedent for future student-led parliamentary engagements in the college.

recognise inappropriate behaviour, understand consent and professional boundaries, and contribute towards building respectful institutional spaces.

Complementing the discussion on workplace safety, Mr. Gokul L. addressed participants on Anti-Ragging Laws in India and the legal consequences associated with ragging and related misconduct. He explained that ragging, in any form, undermines student dignity and violates both institutional discipline and legal standards. The session highlighted the responsibilities of educational institutions in preventing ragging and stressed the importance of early reporting, peer support, and collective responsibility in ensuring student safety. Participants were made aware of disciplinary procedures, legal penalties, and the need to cultivate campuses free from fear, intimidation, and discrimination.

One of the most engaging aspects of the workshop was the interactive nature of the sessions. Students actively participated by raising questions and discussing practical situations relating to harassment, consent, reporting mechanisms, and institutional safeguards. The speakers addressed these concerns with clarity and sensitivity, making the workshop highly informative and relatable. These interactions encouraged participants to move beyond theoretical understanding and appreciate the practical significance of legal awareness and ethical behaviour in everyday life.

The workshop proved to be a valuable learning experience by sensitising students towards issues often overlooked or misunderstood. It strengthened awareness regarding gender justice, equality, and legal accountability while encouraging participants to become responsible individuals capable of contributing towards safe and inclusive institutional environments. Beyond legal knowledge, the programme fostered empathy, ethical responsibility, and respect for individual dignity.
